EIGHTEEN POUNDS OF BABIES

The race is in no danger of dying out as far as Mr. and Mrs. George L. Wittig of Baltimore, Md., can prevent that consummation devoutly not to be wished. They have just been blessed with quadruplets, three girls and one boy; all of them healthy, normal and lusty-lunged. The boy weighed five pounds and the smallest of the girls four pounds and two ounces, making a total of eighteen pounds and three ounces for the group. The proud parents are here photographed with their four treasures fifteen hours after the birth. They already had eight children, so that now the future citizens total a round dozen.

SECRETARY HUGHES OUT- LINES NATIONAL POLICY

Secretary of State Hughes on the occasion of his speech at the Philadelphia meeting commemorating the centenary of the Monroe Doctrine on Nov. 30. Standing next to Mr. Hughes (at right) is Mayor Moore of Philadelphia. The speech of the Secretary was the most important that he has recently made, because, in addition to reaffirming the Monroe Doctrine, he enunciated with extreme clearness the present policy of the United States as regards foreign affairs. He declared that it was better to bear the evils of political isolation than to sacrifice our independent position.

MORE BRICKS FOR JOHN BARLEYCORN'S TOMB

Smokestack of Haussmann's brewery in Madison, Wis., snapped in the act of falling. Prohibition caused it to bite the dust. Workmen first pierced the base and placed the stack upon timber braces. The wood was then fired and all went to a safe distance to watch what happened when it burned through. In a short time it began to totter, then swayed and fell with a deafening crash that was heard for miles.

Scene during the first half of the game between Cornell and the University of Pennsylvania, which was won by the former with a score of 14 to 7. A record-breaking crowd witnessed the battle at Franklin Field, Philadelphia, on Thanksgiving Day. Cornell, which has not lost a game during the last three seasons and has not even been held to a tie score, was expected to win, and fulfilled expectations, but only after a most desperate and determined struggle on the part of the Quakers, who put up a superb defense against Dobie's men.

Events of Note in Foreign Countries

ADDRESS OF FRENCH PREMIER

M. Poincare in the tribune of the French Chamber replying to the speech of the King of England, which indirectly alluded to France as not willing to give assent to proposals which would lead to a solution of the reparations problem. The French Premier denied this with vehemence and said among other things: "I cannot let any one suppose either in France or elsewhere that France has not the keenest desire rapidly to reach a settlement between the Allies." His speech was received with great applause and was followed by a strong vote of confidence.

SPANISH ROYAL COUPLE AT VATICAN

The recent visit of the King and Queen of Spain to Rome was an occasion of great pomp and splendor. They were cordially received by the Italian Government and most warmly greeted at the Vatican when they called to pay their respects to the Pope. Medieval ceremonies were revived for the first time since 1870. The Spanish King and Queen thrice bent their knees before Pope Pius XI., then, kneeling on the steps of the throne, they kissed the Pope's toe, later his hand, thereby restoring the ancient ceremonial to denote humility and the homage due by Catholic sovereigns. (International.)

ENGLISH FLOODS

Torrential rains and overflowing streams have recently visited the Cheshire district of England. Vast areas of farmland have been submerged, houses have been loosened from their foundations and great financial loss has resulted. In some sections the only means of communication was by boats. Fortunately the inundation proceeded slowly, so that ample warning was given to the inhabitants and there was no loss of life. (Wide World Photos.)

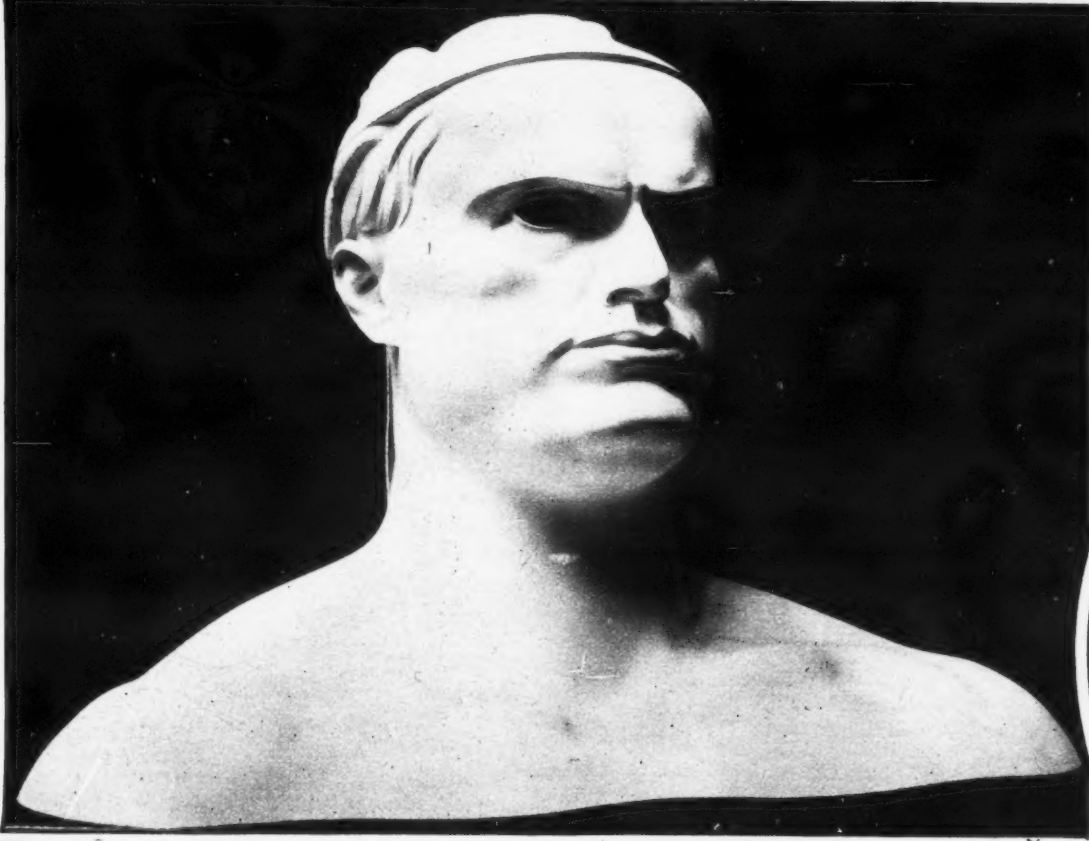

HONORS TO FRANCE'S PREMIER "ACE"

One of the outstanding features of the observance of Armistice Day in France was the unveiling of the monument at Compiègne dedicated to the memory of Guynemer, the greatest French aviator that the war produced. The monument, which was itself most striking in beauty and design, was unveiled with impressive ceremonies in which some of the most eminent dignitaries of the nation took part. Following this came a parade of cavalry and infantry, all the marchers saluting the memorial as they went past.

STERN FACE OF ITALY'S PREMIER IMMORTALIZED IN MARBLE

Bust of Benito Mussolini, Premier of Italy, sculptured by Adolph Vildu of Milan. It has been widely acclaimed as a most characteristic presentation of the hard, determined features of the Fascisti leader, who two years ago had no official standing, but today is all-powerful in Italy—more powerful than the King and absolute master of the Italian Parliament, which only needs to know his wishes in order to carry them out.

END OF MUNICH REVOLT

Great throngs attending the funeral of the victims of the recent Hitler uprising in Munich. The police are said to have fired upon the crowd without warning, and nearly a score were killed while many more were wounded. The revolt was premature and short-lived. Within twenty-four hours after its inception General Ludendorff was under arrest and Hitler was in hiding.

ALBERT B. CUMMINS
President pro tem of the Senate.

HENRY CABOT LODGE
Majority leader in Senate.

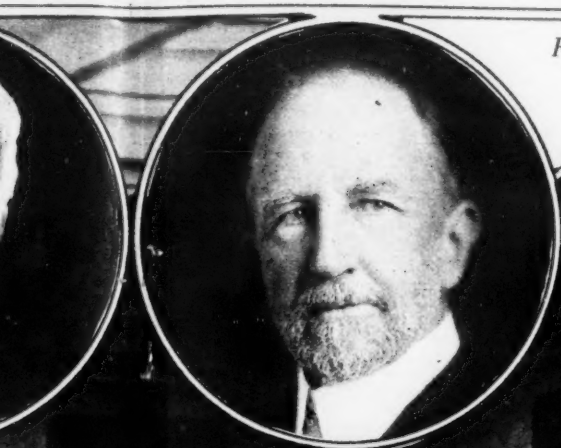

JOSEPH ROBINSON
Minority leader in Senate.

THE first session of the Sixty-eighth Congress opened on Dec. 3 at Washington in the House of Representatives. The first business in order was the election of a Speaker. The regular Republicans nominated Frederick H. Gillett of Massachusetts for re-election. The Democrats cast their ballots for Finis J. Garrett of Tennessee. A deadlock was reached almost immediately because of the revolt of seventeen Progressive Republicans, who voted steadily throughout the day for Henry Allen Cooper of Wisconsin. After unavailing efforts to elect a Speaker the House adjourned. On the following day a truce was reached between the regular Republicans and the more radical Republicans. They agreed to the election of Gillett and the Democrats on the basis of a promise from Representative Longworth, the Republican House leader, to give for liberalization of the rules. The promise by Mr. Longworth, was based on the action of the Sixty-seventh Congress for the first time in session, with the expectation that in the future the rules would be changed would present recommendations to the Rules Committee. and the more radical element. The latter of Gillett and the organization of the House compromise from Representative Nicholas Longan House leader, that opportunity would be of the rules. The compromise, as stated was based on the adoption of the rules of the press for the first thirty days of the present expectation that in the meantime those who changed would present their views and recom- munes Committee. Following this action opportunity would be given for full debate on the proposed changes in the rules on the floor of the House and there would also be an opportunity for the House to adopt such rules as the majority agreed to accept. The report of the Rules Committee on proposed changes, when made to the House, is to be subject to amendments from the House floor.

In the Senate there was little business done apart from the swearing in of the new Senators. Then adjournment was taken out of respect to the memory of the late Senators Nelson, Dillingham and Nicholson.

DESTROYING BEER CONFISCATED IN WASHINGTON

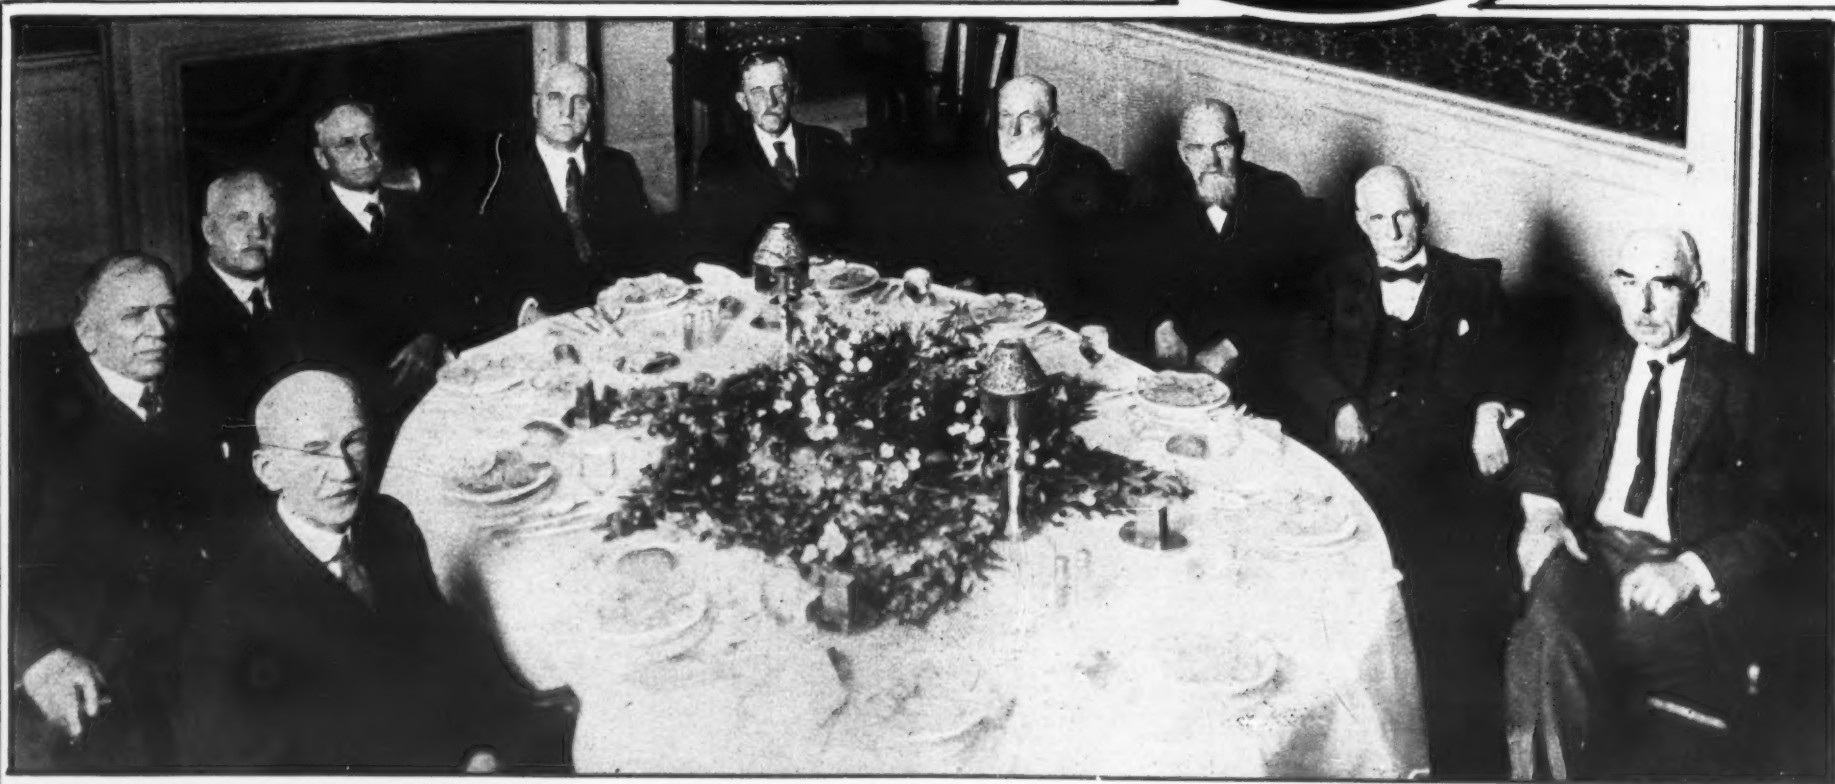

Seven hundred and forty-nine cases of beer whose strength surpassed the minimum stipulated in the Volstead act being destroyed by Government officials of the District of Columbia. The cases aggregated 18,000 bottles that if sold at 25 cents a bottle would have yielded $4,500 to the dispenser. The contraband beer was gathered in during a recent Federal raid and neither consignor nor consignee were known. Prohibition enforcement has been speeded up in the national capital as a result of the disclosures of extensive bootlegging operations a few months ago.

TRICK MUSIC BOX MAKES A GOOD WATCHDOG

When a burglar, prowling through the home of Mrs. Albert A. Rosenshine, wife of a San Francisco Assemblyman, lifted a powder puff in a trick box, sudden strains of music from the box started his feet into a dance that took him out of the front door. The case contained a miniature music box and was a gift to Mrs. Rosenshine. The burglar had $800 worth of valuables when he made his sudden exit, abandoning $11,000 worth of jewels that were within easy reach on the dresser.

"For All of Us"

(II.) Griswald seated in the library of the Warren home, where Joey (Florence Mason) arouses his mirth by suggesting that he use cold cream for his chapped hands. Griswald had served a term in prison for killing a man in a drunken brawl. While in prison his wife had died and he had lost track of his infant daughter. He has now thoroughly reformed and is doing his best to help others.

(I.) Midnight scene in the first act of the play now running at the Forty-ninth Street Theatre, New York City. Frederick Warren (Frank Losee), a millionaire banker, is suffering from a serious illness which distinguished specialists have failed to cure. He himself is hopeless of recovery. A gang of workmen outside the house are repairing the street. The physician suggests that this be stopped for fear it will annoy the patient. Warren asks that the foreman of the gang be sent for. The foreman, Tom Griswald (William Hodge), appears, and his quaint philosophy interests Warren at once.

(IV.) Griswald telling Warren that the real source of his trouble is some sin that he is unwilling to cease from cherishing. If he gets rid of the evil in his heart he will get well. Warren ponders this. He has grown apart from his wife and is in love with Joey, who was his stenographer and is now his nurse, and they had been drifting toward danger.

(V.) Warren's son (Frederick Howard) loves Joey and wants to marry her. At Joey's suggestion he asks his father if there is any reason why he should not. The elder man, whom Griswald has convinced, triumphs over himself, tears from his heart his own affection for Joey and yields his consent.

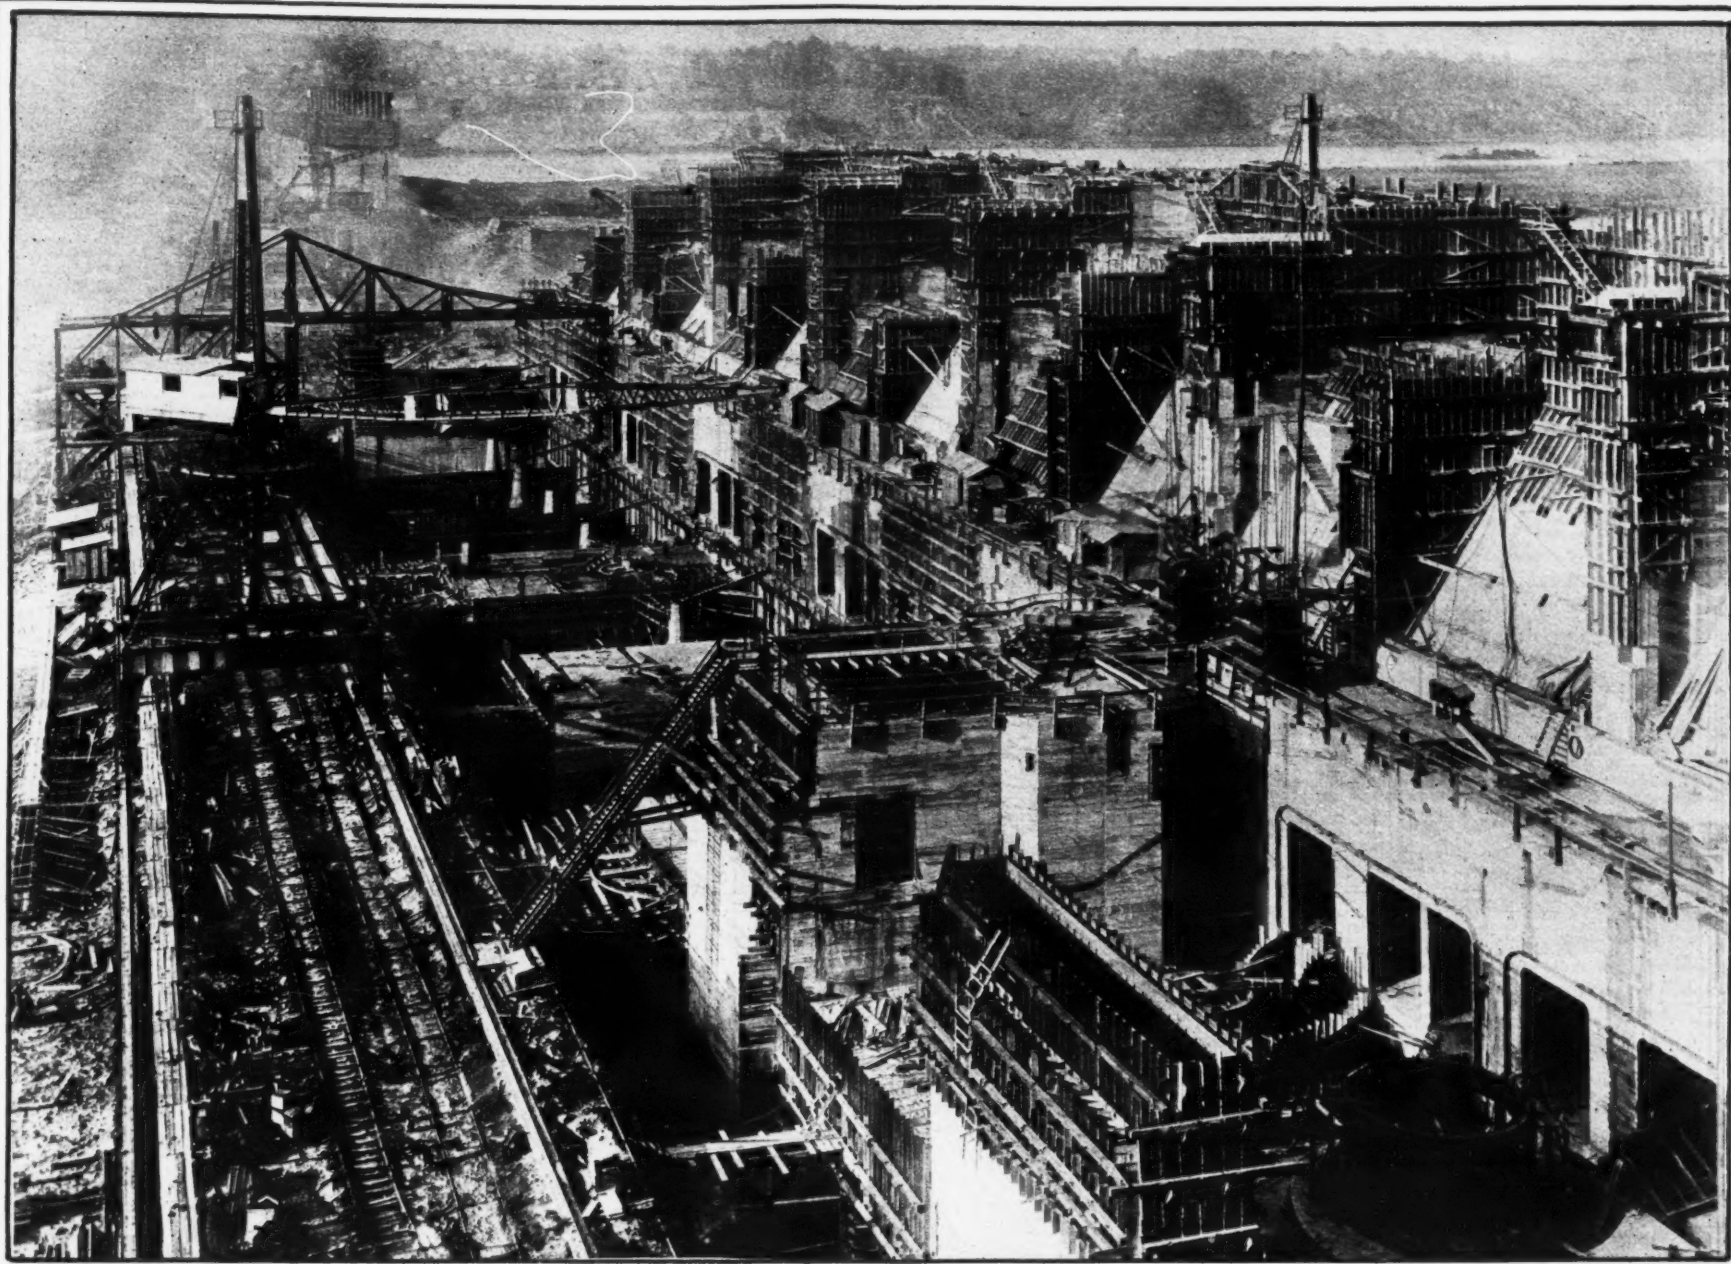

(III.) Jewels have been stolen from the Warren household. A detective, Eugene Merrick (Robert Middlemass), has recovered the jewels and accuses Griswald of having stolen them. Griswald admits that he had had possession of the jewels. He states that he had obtained them from a boy thief whom he was trying to reform. He had secured the jewels from the boy and to put them out of the boy's reach until he could find the real owners had given them to a widow woman to keep for him. The detective, having tracked Griswald to the woman's house, naturally believes that the former is guilty. Griswald is unwilling to give the name of the young thief, whom he wants to protect and reform.

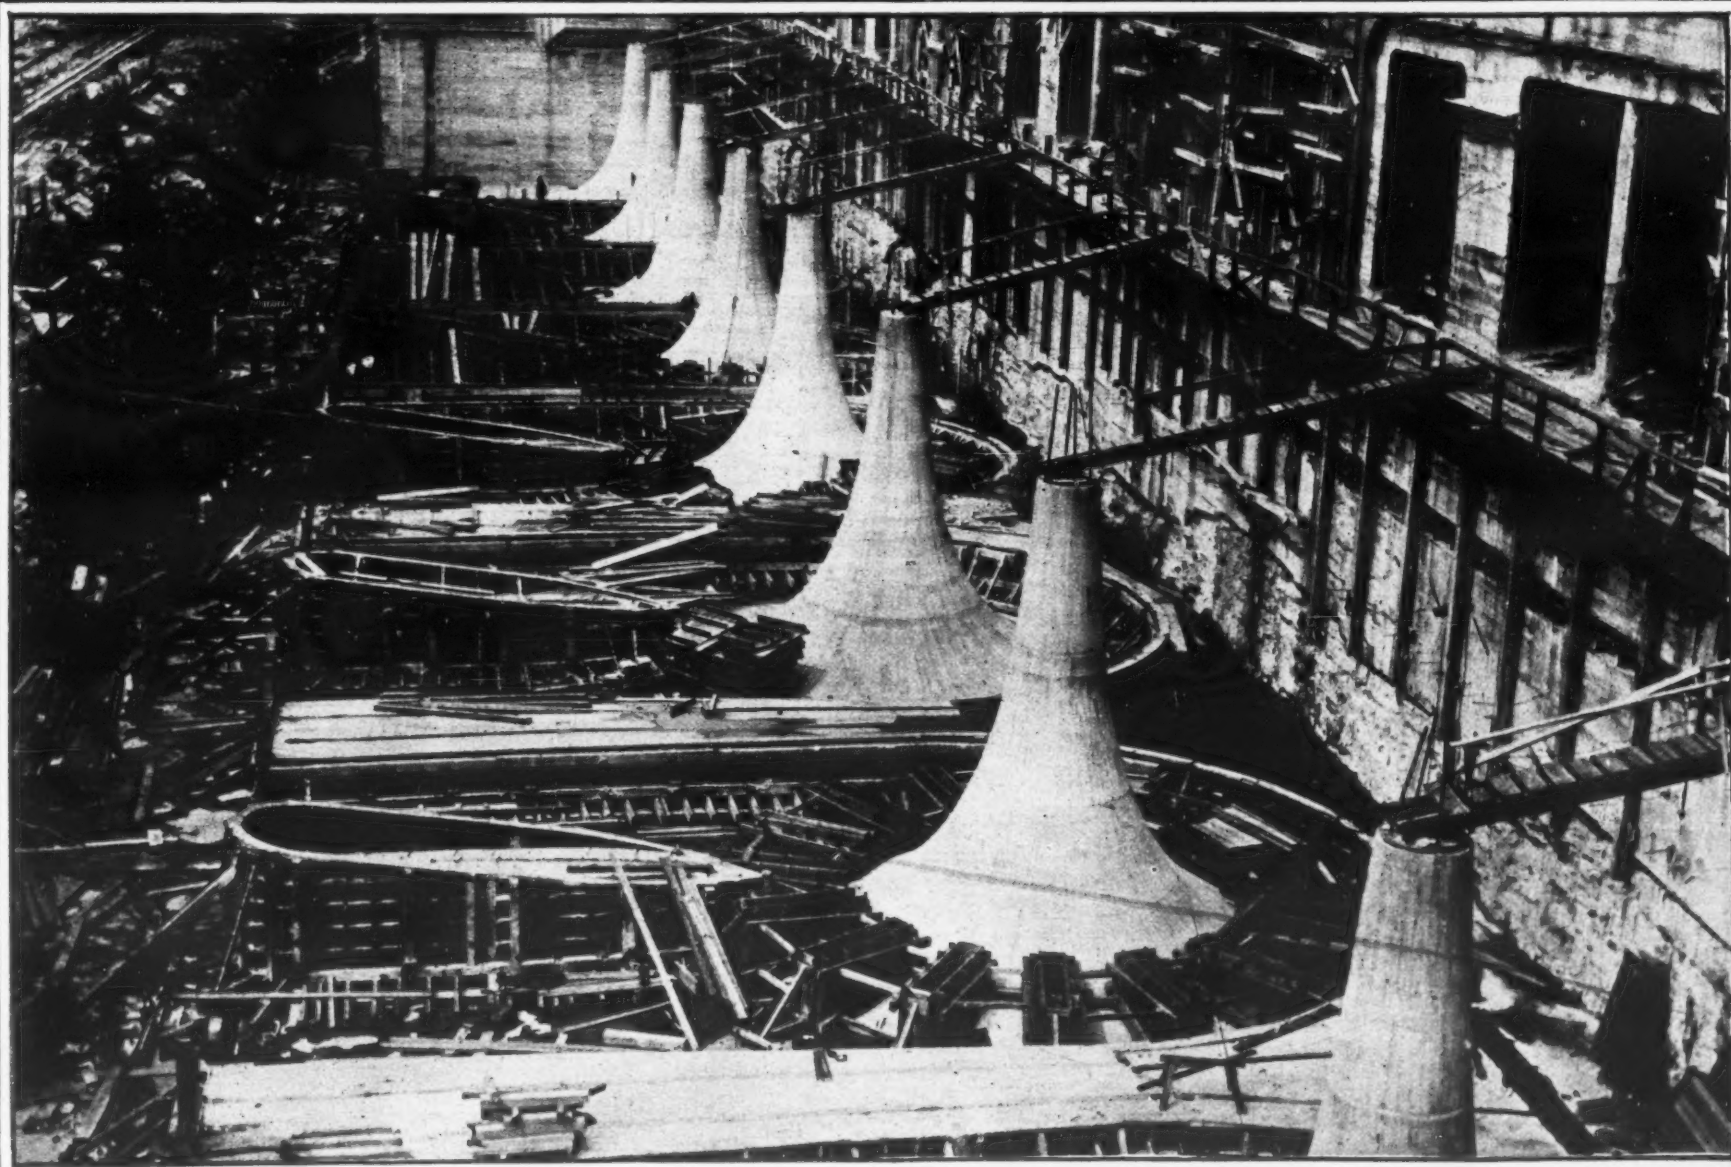

(VI.) Griswald has learned that Joey is his daughter. The young people are happy, but Griswald is perhaps still happier. His homely philosophy and goodness of heart have done their work. He has brought health to Warren's sick soul and body, reunited him with his wife, who has always loved him, and spread an atmosphere of peace and love where formerly there was selfishness, misunderstanding and estrangement.

AUTOMATIC MACHINE FOR SHINING SHOES

One of the latest variations of the cent-in-the-slot idea is illustrated by these shoe-shining machines which have recently been installed in various places in New York City and which, if the innovation meets with popular favor, will probably be placed all over the country. All one has to do is to drop a cent in the machine, place the foot at the designated place and receive a shine either for black or tan footwear.

TEACUP LOUD SPEAKER

Loud speakers attached to radio sets are of almost infinite variety, but one of the simplest forms of intensifying sound has been discovered to be an ordinary teacup. The regular head phones can be connected with the amplifier and then placed in two teacups, as herewith shown. A sweet, clear, bell-like tone will result. The thinner the cup and the finer its quality the better will be the tone produced.

NOVEL AND EFFICIENT AERIAL

This aerial, built by J. Harris Rodgers of Hyattsville Md., corresponds to a loop using ten turns of wire, but in this case Mr. Rodgers has made each turn consist of twelve separate wires, all properly distanced in the manner herewith shown. This reduces the resistance and distributing capacity to a minimum and makes tuning extremely selective.

"The Ten Commandments"
Photoplay Based on the Biblical Story of the Exodus

Egyptian chariots starting from the gates of the capital in pursuit of the escaping Israelites, following Pharaoh's change of heart.
 (Curtis.)

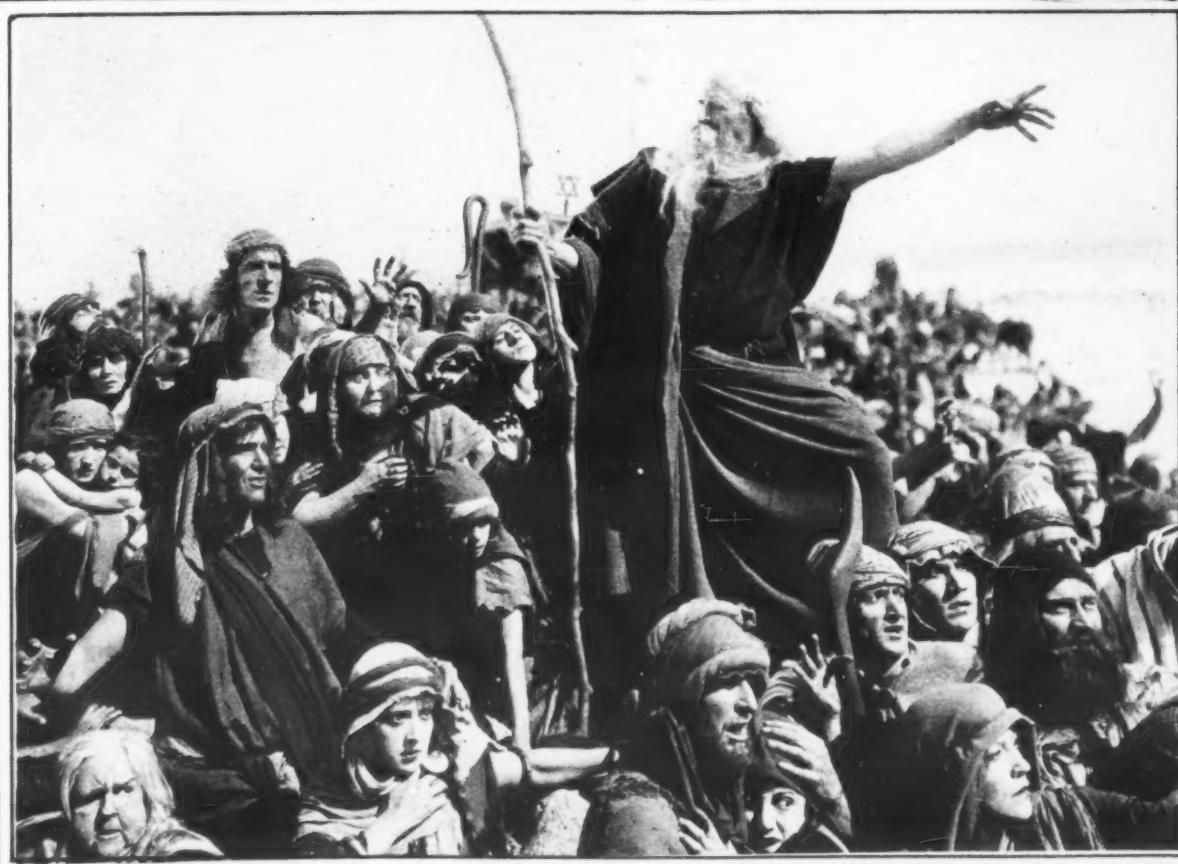

The Pharaoh of Egypt and his beloved son prior to the passage of the Death Angel over the land of Egypt smiting with death the first-born of every Egyptian household, not even exempting the heir to the throne.

THE "Ten Commandments," the mammoth photoplay shortly to be seen in New York City, is said to be the first picturing on an elaborate scale of the dramatic events that led up to the founding of the Hebrew nation and the giving of the law from Mount Sinai. The Bible scenes form a one-hour introduction to a story of the application of the Ten Commandments to modern life. The exodus shows the freed Israelites pouring out of the City of Rameses with their flocks and herds. Led by Moses and Joshua, they crossed the Egyptian desert to the Red Sea. Pharaoh's chariots and fighting men pursue them and the affrighted people murmur: "Hast thou brought us out of Egypt to die in the wilderness?" Their dejection is exchanged for triumph when their enemies are engulfed in the waters of the Red Sea. The giving of the law on Mount Sinai is dramatically presented and the end of the story shows the punishment visited upon the breakers of the First Commandment.

Moses on Mount Sinai engraving on the rock the Ten Commandments which had been written by the Almighty in flaming letters of fire on the sky. Afterward by a miracle the rock is cloven into twin tablets of stone.

Moses pointing out to the Israelites the miracle by which Jehovah had saved them from the wrath of the Egyptians by parting the waters of the Red Sea so that the fugitives could pass through and overwhelming their pursuers when they attempted to follow.

"PORTRAIT OF A WOMAN"
One of Rembrandt's paintings that the former owner, Prince Youssouppoff, is now trying to repurchase. He has just returned to America bringing jewels claimed to be worth a million, and it is said that he will attempt to reclaim the paintings, which had been heirlooms in his family since the time of Peter the Great.

Christmas Crowds on Fifth Avenue.

FIFTH AVENUE

—Street of the Christmas Spirit

THE shops of Fifth Avenue provide an Arabian Night's entertainment of fashion and fancy.

Variety, luxury, splendor and beauty adorn the innumerable shops which stud this great thoroughfare—the Rue de la Paix of America. And just at this season, when the store windows are gay with holiday suggestions and on almost every corner a Salvation Army Santa Claus with the merry tinkle of his bell adds a touch of color to the scene, Fifth Avenue seems to excel itself in point of beauty and splendor.

Move up the Avenue with the throng. No more inspiring sight can be imagined than the gay carnival of eager Christmas shoppers, thousands of them from out of town.

Oriental shops; book shops which are world-famous; art galleries with every conceivable allurements for the connoisseur, from old masters and Chinese pottery to the most modern and daring of Futuristic products; shops of lustrous silks and velvets; shops of dainty linens and laces, always so dear to the feminine heart; shops of glittering gems and silver; shops of furs, woollens, leather; shops that lure the sportsman and the man-about-town; salons which are veritable Temples of Music—all these pass in review, flanked by the mammoth department stores of the Avenue which are a world in themselves.

And the gifts are varied and beautiful. Here are ephemeral wearables and there gifts that will last a lifetime. Brasses, batiks, oddities, curios, clocks and sporting outfits delight us with their range of shapes and colors.

Even more brilliant would be a second's imaginary glance at the kaleidoscopic panorama of countries from which these gifts emanate, for Fifth Avenue constantly searches the world for the exceptional, the new and the stylish. Thousands of representatives are stationed in all parts of the world and Christmas time only emphasizes the value of the all-year-round efforts of its merchants to delve more deeply than competitors into the merchandise possibilities of the world.

Russia has sent furs; France, boudoir suggestions, feminine attire and perfume; Great Britain, variegated cravats and sports wear for men. Venetian beaded bags, Italian trinkets, dainty Belgian linens and lingerie offer the gift-seeker countless opportunities for selection. Austria provides household effects; China, antiques and the new-old game, Mah Jong. Smokers' articles are brought from Damascus; winter apparel from Switzerland, and ornaments from Japan. There is no end to the listing. No place in the world, however small or however far away, has been overlooked.

And the Avenue is, of course, a Wonderland of Toys from all over the world.

Just a word to the shopper who wishes to take fullest advantage of the great assortment of gifts in the shops on Fifth Avenue: "Your choice is better, if you resolve to, and do shop early."

BETWEEN LAKE AND SKY
While North and East are in the grip of the Winter "King," California is still basking beneath sunny skies and no chilly blasts assail this mermaid snapped recently while preparing for a dive into the milk-warm waters of Lake Arrowhead in Arrowhead Woods, Southern California.

PAGEANT IN GREAT ENGLISH LACE CENTRE
A bewildering variety of costumes made of lace was one of the features of the great Nottingham lace ball recently held at Victoria Hall in that city. The design was to vindicate the theory that British lace, whose fame is world wide and the production of which is one of Nottingham's staple industries, could be made into gowns that would vie with those produced in any other country.

ODDLY MATED
Mr. and Mrs. Burton S. Tucker, the former 16 years old and the latter 49, who were recently married, are now residing at Ridgely Park, N. J. Earnest efforts are being made by the mother of the boy to annul the marriage, which she alleges was secured through perjury. The bride is wealthy, owns a big hotel in New York, and is said to have given her beardless spouse a checking account of $10,000 for pin money.
